Womens History Museum Zambia

Some of the collections held in the Swedish Ethnographic Museum lack important context and relevance which Zambia's contemporary and historical interpretations could add. Many artefacts belong to cultural traditions that colonial governments and museums actively discouraged and misrepresented.

Some of these traditions and their supporting knowledge and resource management systems still survive, often through the tenacity of women custodians. For the Swedish Ethnographic Museum, access to such contemporary sources would contribute to a richer understanding of a shared, but difficult, history and cultural heritage. For The Women's History Museum of Zambia the platform will create access and improve the metadata of objects and documents deposited in the Swedish Ethnographic Museum by the Zambian public.
